SWEEPING MOVE TO REDUCE ARMS, IS U.S. DEMAND

Make Kellogg Pact Key to Armament Policy, Says American Delegate

WILLING TO CONSIDER ANY REDUCTION PLAN

Britain Voices General Agreement With Plan for Big Cut in Naval Forces

GENEVA — The speech delivered by Hugh S. Gibson, American delegate at the Preparation Discovery gate at the Preparatory Disarma-ment Commission, on April 22, left no doubt that the United States was prepared to give immediate effect to the Kellogg Pact, by making it a starting point for a new agreement for sweeping reductions in naval

Mr. Gibson made an emphatic appeal for reductions in armaments which would relieve the burden of taxation and release human energies from the war machine. He lifted the controversy above purely technical considerations and placed it on the basis of the moral obligation to re-duce armaments which arises from ratification of the pact. The Kellogg Pact, said Mr. Gibson, offered an unprecedented opportunity for a new approach to the whole question of disarmament. It could re-move the doubts and apprehensions which formerly were the great obstacle to reducing armaments. In the light of the pact there was no reason why the nations should not come to regard armaments as the relic of another age.

British Concurrence

Mr. Gibson gave detailed points on which, in the opinion of his Government, agreement might be reached at an early stage. From this it is clear that, although the United States has not departed from the view concerning the advantage of calculating tonnage by categories, it is prepared to give greater elasticity to this method according to the French suggestion of transferring a small percentage of tonnage from one category to another.

Other factors, such as age, unit of displacement, caliber of guns, might, according to Mr. Gibson, be considered in estimating equivalent ton-

The President's Speech Members and friends of the Associated Press: I have accepted this occasion for a frank statement of what I consider the dominant issue before the American people. And I wish to discuss it as law, not as to the merits or demerits of a particular law but all law, federal and state, for ours is a gove of laws made by the people A surprising number of our people, otherwise of responsibility in the community, have drifted into the extraordinary notion that laws are made for those who choose to obey them.

And in addition, our law-enforcement machinery is suffering from many infirmities arising out of its technicalities, its circumlocutions, its involved procedures, and too often, I regret, from inefficient and de-linquent officials.

Reaping the Harvest We are reaping the harvest of hese defects. More than 9000 human beings are lawlessly killed every year in the United States. Little more than half as many arrests follow. Less than one-sixth of these slayers are convicted and but a scandalously small percentage are

Life and property are relatively more unsafe than in any other civilized country in the world.

In spite of all this we have reason to pride ourselves on our institutions and the high moral instincts of the great majority of our people. No one will assert that such crimes would be committed if we had even a nor mal respect for law and if the laws

In order to dispel certain illusions in the public mind on this subject, let me say at once that while violations of law have been increased by inclusion of crimes under the Eighteenth Amendment and by the vast sums that are poured into the vast sums that are poured into the hands of the criminal classes by the patronage of illicit liquor by otherwise responsible citizens, yet this is but one segment of our problem.

I have purposely cited the extent of murder, burglary, robbery, forgery, and embezzlement, for but a small percentage of these can be attributed to the Fightenth Amendment In invasion of lawlessn What We Are Facing What we are facing today is sor thing far larger and more fundamental—the possibility that respect for law as law is fading from the sensibilities of our people. Whatever the values of any law may be, the enforcement of that law written in plain terms upon our statute books is not, in my mind, a debatable question.

Law should be observed and must be enforced until it is repealed by the proper processes of our de-

The duty to enforce the laws rests

If a law is wrong, its rigid enforcement is the surest guaranty of its repeal. If it is right, its enforcement is the quickest method of compelling respect for it.

I have seen statements published within a few days encouraging citizens to defy a law because that particular journal did not approve of the law itself. I leave comment of such an attitude to any citizen with such an attitude to any citizen wi a sense of responsibility to country.

In my position, with my of tions, there can be no argumen these points. There is no citizen who would approve of the President of the United States assuming any other attitude. It may be said by some that the larger responsibility for the enforcement of laws against crime rests with state and local authorities and it does not concern the Federal Government.

But it does concern the President of the United States, both as a citi-zen and as the one upon whom rests the primary responsibility of leader-ship for the establishment of standards of law enforcement in this country. Respect for law and obedi-ence to law does not distinguish be-tween federal and state laws—it is

Awakening Moral Sense

After all, the processes of criminal-law enforcement are simply methods of instilling respect and fear into the minds of those who have not the intelligence and moral instinct to obey the law as a matter of conscience. The real problem is to awaken this consciousness, this moral sense, and if necessary to segregate such degenerate minds where they can do no future harm.

We have two immediate problems before us in government. To investigate our existing agencies of enforcement and to reorganize system of enforcement in such man-ner as to eliminate its weaknesses. It is the purpose of the federal administration systematically to strengthen its law-enforcement agencies week by week, month by onth, year by year, not by dramatic splays and violent attacks in order make headlines, not by violating the law itself through misuse of the law in its enforcement, but by steady pressure, steady weeding out of all incapable and negligent officials no matter what their status: by encouragement, promotion, and recognition for those who do their duty; and by the most rigid scrutiny of the records and attitudes of all persons suggested for appointment to official posts in our entire law-en forcement machinery.

That is administration for which my colleagues and I are as fully re-sponsible as the human material which can be assembled for the task will succeed. Furthermore, I wish to determine and, as far as possible, remove the sources of inherent deremove the sources of innerent defects in our present system that defeat the most devoted officials.

Every student of our law-enforcement mechanism knows full well that it is in need of vigorous reor-ganization; that its procedure un-duly favors the criminal; that our judiciary needs to be strengthened; that the methods of assembling our juries need revision; that justice must be more swift and sure.

Sympathy Misplaced

Sympathy Misplaced

In our desire to be merciful the pendulum has swung in favor of the prisoner and far away from the protection of society. The sympathetic mind of the American people in its overconcern about those who are in difficulties has swung too far from the family of the murdered to the family of the murderer.

With a view to enlisting public understanding, public support, accurate determination of the facts, and constructive conclusions, I have proposed to establish a national commission to study and report upon the whole of our problems involved in criminal-law enforcement. That proposal has met with gratifying support, and I am sure it will have the co-operation of the bar associations and crime commissions in our various states in the widespread effort now being made by them.

I do not propose to be hasty in the selection of this commission.

I do not propose to be hasty in the selection of this commission. I want time and advice, in order that I may select high-minded men, impartial in their judgment, skilled in the science of the law and our judicial system, clear in the conception of our institutions. Such a commission can perform the greatest of service to our generation.

There is another and vastly wider field than the nature of laws and the methods of their enforcement. This is the basic question of the understanding, the ideals, the relationship of the individual citizen to the law itself

It is in this field that the press plays a dominant part. It is almost-final in its potency to arouse the interest and consciousness of our people. It can destroy their finer sensibilities or it can invigorate them. I am well aware that the great majority of our important journals day by day give support to these high ideals.

How the Press Can Help

I wonder, sometimes, however, if perhaps a little more support to our laws could not be given in one di-rection. If, instead of the glamour of rection. If, instead of the glamour of romance and heroism, which our American imaginative minds too frequently throw around those who break the law, he would invest with a little romance and heroism those a little romance and heroism those thousands of our officers who are endeavoring to enforce the law it would itself decrease crime.

Praise and respect for those who properly enforce the laws would help. Perhaps a little better propor tioned balance of news concerning those criminals who are convicted and punished would serve to instil the fear of the law.

I need not repeat that absolute dom of the press to discuss public questions is a foundation stone of American liberty. I put the question however, to every individual con-science, whether flippancy is a useful servants. After hiring them it is ouir purpose casually to review their actions, to accept those which we approve, and to reject the rest.

This attitude of mind is destructive of self-government, for self-government is predicated upon the fact that every responsible citizen will take his part in the creation of law, the obedience to law, and the selection of officials and methods for its enforcement.

Every citizen has a personal duty in it—the duty to order his own actions, to so weigh the effect of his example, that his conduct shall be a positive force in his community with respect to the law.

I have no criticism to make of the American press. I greatly admire its independence and its courage. I sometimes feel that it could give more emphasis to one phase of another of our national problems, but I realize the difficulties under which it operates.

> Writes to Senator McNary That He Arrived at Conclusions After Careful Analysis by Men Competent to Conduct the Survey

its enforcement,
Finally, I wish again to reiterate that the problem of law enforcement is not alone a function or business of government. If the law can be upheld only by enforcement officers, then our scheme of government is The White House Washington, April 20, 1929. The Honorable Charles L. McNary, United States Senate.

My Dear Mr. Senator: On April 12 I received a call from yourself and Senators Capper, Heffin, Norbeck and Ransdell, acting as a subcommittee of the Senate Comsubcommittee of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, requesting my opinion on the "export debenture plan" for agricultural relief, since it is a complete departure from the principles already debated during the campaign.

I informed the committee that I would request an analysis of the plan by the Departments of Agriculture. Treasury and Commerce.

culture, Treasury and Commerce and would transmit them to the committee together with my con-clusions after investigation. The departments have given it earnest con-sideration and I have just received and studied these reports which I transmit to you herewith.

Description of Proposal The principle of this plan, as set out in the draft bill of your committee, which is before me, is to issue a government debenture to products in amount of one-half of the tariff on such products—such debentures to be redeemed by presentation for payment of import duties. tation for payment of import duties.
The assumption is that by creating a searcity through stimulating exports that the domestic price will rise above world prices to the amount of the debenture—that is, if the debenture on wheat exports is 21 cents a bushel, the price of wheat will be 21 cents higher in the domes-tic market than in the world market. I am aware of the arguments put

I am aware of the arguments put forward in favor of the plan by some of our agricultural organizations, and the arguments of other farm organizations in opposition to it. The proposers advance it in the utmost good faith and earnest desire to assist in solution of a great prob-lem, and I regret deeply that I cannot agree that this provision would bring the results expected. On the contrary I am convinced that it would bring disaster to the American farmer.

Finds 10 Faults in Plan The weaknesses of the plan as set forth in the Senate bill may be summarized as follows:

summarized as follows:

1. The issue of debentures to export merchants and their redemption in payment of import duties amounts to a direct subsidy from the United States Treasury. If the plan proposed be generally applied it would cost in excess of $200,000,000 a year, as it would decrease the treasury receipts by such as amount.

2. The first result of the plan, if put into operation, would be a gi-gantic gift from the Government and the public to the dealers and and the public to the dealers and manufacturers and speculators in these commodities. For instance, in the principal export commodities the value of the present volume of stocks in possession of these trades would, if the plan worked, rise by from $200,000,000 to $400,000,000, according to different calculations, without a cent return to the farmer or consumer.

without a cent return to the farmer or consumer.

Every speculator for a rise in our public markets would receive enormous profits. Conversely, if after this elevation of prices the plan were at any time for any reason withdrawn, the trades would suffer a like loss and a long line of bankruptcies must ensue. Eat in the meantime the trades, out of fear of withdrawal or of reduction in the subsidy, would not engage in nor-mal purchase and distribution. Either exorbitant margins would be required or, alternatively, the farmer would be compelled to him-self hold the Nation's stocks until there was a demand for actual con-sumption.

Would Stimulate Overproduction 3. If the increased price did reflect to the farmer, the plan would stimulate overproduction and thereby increase world supply, which would in turn depreciate world prices and consequently decrease the price which the farmer would receive, and thereby defeat the plan. Stimulation of production has been the outstanding experience abroad where export subsidy has been applied. Overproduction will defeat the plan, and then, upon its withdrawal, agriculture would be plunged into a catastrophe of defiation from overexpanded production. The farmer's difficulties today are in some part due to this process after the war.

4. The stimulation of production of certain commodities would disturb the whole basis of diversification in American agriculture, particularly in the cotton and wheat sections, where great progress is ticularly in the cotton and wheat sections, where great progress is now being made toward a more stable basis of agriculture.

5. Although it is proposed that the plan should only be installed at the discretion of the Farm Board, yet the tendency of all boards is to use the whole of their authority, and more certainly in this case in view of the pressure from those who would not understand its possibility of harm, and emphatically sibility of harm, and emphatically from the interested dealers in the Opportunity for Manipulation 6. It is not proposed to pay the debentures of subsidies to the farmers, but to the export merchants. and it seems certain that a large part of it would not be reflected back to the farmer. It offers opportunity for manipulation in the export mar-ket, none of which would be of ad-vantage to the farmer.

The conditions of competitive marketing at home and abroad and the increased risks would absorb a considerable part of its effect into the distribution and manufacturing trades. Moreover, the theoretical benefits would be further diminished by the fact that debentures woul sell constantly at a discount, for the reason that persons paying duties upon imports would not take the trouble to accumulate the debentures and lose interest on them unless obtainable at a discount.

7. The provision of such an export subsidy would necessitate a revision of the import tariffs. For instance, an export subsidy of 2 cents a pound on raw cotton would mean the foreign manufacturers mean the foreign manufacturers would be receiving cotton at 2 cents a pound less than the American manufacturers, and the foreigner could ship his manufactured goods back into the American market with this advantage. As the subsidy, in many cases, is larger than the freight to foreign ports and back it raises large apportunities of frend in relarge opportunities of fraud in re-turn shipment activities.

Competition in Stock Raising Competition in Stock Raising

3. Export bounties are recognized by many nations as one form of dumping. I am advised that a similar action by another nation would be construed as a violation of our own laws. Such laws are in force in the principal countries of our export markets and, to protect their own agriculture, would probably lead to action which would nullify the subsidy given by us.

3. A further serious question arises again (if the plan did have the effect intended) where the foreign effect intended) where the foreign producer of animals would be en-abled to purchase feed for less than the American farmer producing the same animals.

FROM OUR LONDON HOUSE

American corn for less than the American farmer across the border, and it would tend to transfer the production of pork products for export to Europe from the United States to Canada. It would have the same and probably even more disastrous effect in dairy products.

Would Increase Taxes

would increase Taxes

10. The plan would require a substantial increase in taxes, as no such expenditure or depletion of revenues as this plan implies could be paid from marginal income of the Government, more particularly in view of the very large increased expenditures imposed by the naval program, flood control and other branches of farm relief. Altogether, from the above reasons, it is my opinion that the theoretical benefits would not be reflected to the American farmer; that it would create profiteering that it contains elements which would bring American agriculture to disaster. The introduction of such a plan would also inevitably confuse and minimize the much more far-reaching plan of farm relief, upon the ing pian of farm rener, upon the fundamental principles of which there has been general agreement.

Yours faithfully,

HERBERT HOOVER.

Silent Banquets Ordered in Spain - Revolt Grows Despite Loyalty Demonstration

BY WIRELESS TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MON MADRID - After-dinner speeches have come to be regarded with great suspicion by the Spanish Government, especially after its trouble with Señor Valle Inclan, the popular novelist, and "speechless banquets" are now the order of the day. When the College of Commission Agents met after their annual meeting for the usual spread, they were informed by an emissary from the chief of police that "there must be no speeches."

A prominent Madrid merchant, who was presiding, thereupon arose and addressed the assembly by silent means, expressing satisfaction over the proceedings by means of ges-tures and smiles.

A semi-spontaneous demonstration here recently was supposed to be a popular show of hands in favor of Gen. Primo de Rivera.

The Union Patriotica, through the medium of government organs, proclaimed the manifestations as an immense success, and indeed, from the point of view of organization, considering it was planned only a fortnight previously, the arrange ments were exceptional.

A large number of people came to the capital from the provinces, representing local branches of the Union Patriotica and various sections of the public benefiting by the régime. Daily papers throughout

The Piedmont people attribute their progress to several things: the population, the climate, the location and the water power from the mountains. Many see in the recent industrial growth here a forecast of what may take place throughout the whole of the "new" South. At any rate, the Piedmont is now experiencing a great uprush of husiness. Politicians, intelligentsia, university professors and students now form a fairly solid block against the Government. Another university, that of Oviedo, has been closed, and the rector and professors dismissed. It is not clear what the Government can agreat uprush of business.

As a typical example, consider that during a recent twelve-month, 72 manufacturing plants came into the Piedmont Carolinas, or an average of a new one every five days. not clear what the Government can gain by its obstinacy on the question at issue, namely, the granting to two schools, run by religious orders, of authority to award university diplo-mas. In view of the trouble this caused, the heads of these schools ex-pressed a wish to renounce their rights to this privilege, and even friends of the regime consider it Comparison of Values rapid growth of the Piedmont can be used. For example, compare the increased values to be found about the city blocks of New York City in the Grand Central area, and the parallel increase in the Carolina Piedmont. In the 20 years' era in New York, that territory is computed to have increased in wealth by 631 per cent. It seems spectacular, until it is remembered that the total wealth in the Piedmont has increased

Then again, compare the 10-year increase in per capita wealth of the Piedmont region and that of five of the Nation's richest states: it is 105 per cent in one case, as against 35 per cent in the other! To get down to particulars, the Pledmont area leads all the states in the number of textile mills.

Conditions Appear Ideal The secretaries of the local chambers of commerce eagerly inform visitors that it contains the largest towel factory in the world; the three-quarters of the available worklargest damask mills in the Nation; the largest underwear plant; the largest hosiery mills; the largest denim mills, and the second largest aluminium plant in the world.

Taking all these facts for what they are worth, the general truth is tion is that they are, almost without that the whole area has shown a exception, city-like in such advanthat the whole area has shown a recent, amazing progress. Probably the major reason for this is the plentiful supply of intelligent labor, which is a condition always present in a territory that is in transition from an agricultural to an industrial life. Incidentally, the birth rate here surpasses that elsewhere in the United States.

There is a vast, newly tapped reservoir of good labor to be found in the Pladment territory and this sides the wheels of the Southern Public Utilities Company and its allied interests.

North Carolina the working week of 60 "productive" hours obtains, which means that, time off for In South Carolina the week is 55 hours. The pay envelopes are thinner than in the North, though it is claimed hereabouts that there are compensatory advantages in the way really "concealed wages."

It is only fair to say, however, that such claims are in dispute, and that the National Industrial Conference Board (an organization of manufacturers from all parts of the country) has computed that living costs are approximately the same for a family in a textile mill in Green-ville, S. C., say, and a mill village in Rhode Island.

At any rate, labor is certainly cheaper and works longer hours here than in the North, and the result has been a wholesale migration of factories. In recent years wages have tended to advance in the Piedmont territory, and a movement is on foot also, to shorten hours, particularly for women and children.

Out of a population of more than 1,974,000 in the Piedmont Carolinas, men are still engaged in agriculture. This means that there is a labor reserve for the factories that may be established in years to come. Sunder operation of prosperity index, and it is utterly impossible that Germany should prefer to continue to the state of many should prefer to continue to pay this amount instead of the smaller amount proposed by the Allies. On the other hand, the French are extremely anxious to commercialize the debt and will make serious concessions to this end.

The financial necessities of both sides therefore demand a resumption of negotiations. Whether there is short adjournment will not affect three fundamental facts. The compromise must come after a period of what one spokesman described as "bluffing." The German offer is a minimum, while the Allied claim is a maximum. There is still prospect at an earlier or later date of a rapprochement of the two viewpoints.

The German Government's reaction to the widely published insinuations of the political nature of Dr. Schacht's memorandum will be explained.

The text of this memorandum has points out Germany "must also be permitted to create anew beyond the permitted to create anew beyond the permitted to create anew beyond the convention of 1914 for saled, which will be its own property and life at sea and the preparation new convention," it was stated.

words: "As to Germany's supply of foodstuffs it is necessary before all else that imports be replaced partly by home production. On this account the fact must not be lost sight of that on its Oriental frontiers Germany has lost territories which agriculturally had a surplus production and that besides a whole province was separated from the rest of the Reich. The prosperity of this province is de-clining in such a way that the Reich is obliged to grant it regular subsidies. It is consequently neces-csary to grant measures susceptible of remedying this unfavorable state of affairs which reduces Germany's capacity to pay."

France Cannot Be Blamed,

BAR-LE-DUC, France (A) - Prenier Poincaré, addressing the general council of the Meuse Departwas perfectly willing to revert to the original Dawes plan, having reached the limits of its concessions

In his speech, which was the most important political pronouncement since the beginning of the year, the Premier fired the first gun in the campaign of municipal elections to be held throughout France on May 5. "As debtors we have always remained faithful to our undertakings," said the Premier, "so little do we dream of renouncing them that up to the present we have regularly met the payments on our foreign idebts which have been agreed upon. It is, however, equitable that we seek in the recovery of our own war debts the means with which to pay what we owe our former allies and associ-

MAINE'S MOTOR LAWS CHANGED IN SAFETY MOVE

New Code Calls for More Care in City, More Speed in Country

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO AUGUSTA, Me.-Three important changes from the present law are incorporated in the new motor vehicle code law, passed by the Eighty-fourth Legislature. One of these deals with the granting of operators' licenses to minors, another to the speed on open country roads and a third to the revocation of licenses in case of conviction for intoxication.

Under the new law the Secretary of State is forbidden to grant the application of any minor under 18 to operate a motor vehicle unless such application is signed by the ring criticism of the ambiguous and proper authority. Other speed provisions are: Fifteen miles an hour when passing a school during recess or opening and closing hours; 15 miles an hour while approaching an intersection; 25 miles an hour on any way in a business district controlled by traffic officers; 20 miles an hour on all other ways in a business district or built-up por-tion, and 25 miles an hour in a resience district and in public parks.

Persons whose license or permit to operate a motor vehicle has been revoked on conviction of operating motor vehicle when intoxicated cannot be licensed again for three years except that the Secretary of State may, after hearing, issue a li cense after one year.

PREMIER MAKES STATEMENT OF BRITISH POLICY

the Conservative Intentions If Returned

The following is the Conservative Party's program as announced in a speech by Stanley Baldwin, Prime Minister of Great Britain.

While others are searching for policies to meet an emergency which is not likely to arise, we on our part ance of the policy in which we are engaged. We shall continue the process now going on, that of con-quering unemployment. The partners that at least 24 per cent of the flour in industry, the masters and the men, have been gettting together. We are shall be milled from home wheat. recovering in the world our competitive power, our trade is definitely improving and, provided that no cataclysm of any kind in the way of a sudden reversal or an alteration in the industrial policy of this country occurs, that progress will be maintained and unemployment will continue to fall. Now what are we doing to help industry and to get men and women into permanent employment? We are trying by arrangements with the time has come to go forward Dominion governments to make it farther and faster in the direction of easier for them to go to the Do-minions overseas. We are trying by transference to get men from the "black spots" into districts where

We have given a great deal of attention to juveniles and we have so progressed with juvenile unemployment centers that practically every boy in these depressed areas, if he wishes, can go to an unemployment center and can, through that be passed, if his parents consent, into an industry in some other part of the country. But the most grievous lot is that of the man, not skilled, who is thrown out of work owing to the reorganization and rationalization which is going on. We have met that difficulty by forming training centers in which a man undergoes intensive training for some months which fits him for many kinds of work into which he has been drafted and great numbers have met with success already. That policy we shall continue as the demand for it arises, and we are from time to time, where they are most needed, opening such centers for these men. For industry itself we felt strongly that some form of assistance must be given. Value of Safeguarding

We have so far been satisfied with the results of safeguarding as a most valuable adjunct in producing permanent employment. We are pledged and shall continue to be pledged not to impose any taxes on food. A careful examination of the administra-tion of the Safeguarding Act, based on the experience of the last four years, might enable us to simplify certain details in the procedure. No manufacturing industry should be barred from presenting its case be-

Regarding the Washington Convention, we are strongly in favor of getting this international agreement, but we have to take care that when such agreements are made, they will be in language and meaning which tremendous. For the first time at this be kept in letter and spirit by other countries as they will be by this country, otherwise they will do our industry more harm than good.

Easing Agriculture's Burden I pass on to say a few words about agriculture. We have done a great deal already in the way of easing the agricultural rating burden and Stanley Baldwin Announces providing more money for rural roads and thereby relieving agricul-ture. We have also done something for the reduction of freights. We shall continue the good work the Ministry of Agriculture has done in helping forward research and education. Regarding drainage, we are pro-ceeding with that.

The Merchandise Marks Act has been of value, and will be of increasing value and a practical step we are taking is this: We have decided that during the six months from Octo-ber to March, always an anxious immersed in a great time for the stock-keeper, beef for struggle for years for the continu- the army, air force and navy in home ports shall all be British home killed. Government's Housing Policy

Now I will run rather briefly over other parts of our policy which are the natural development and the will stand the scrutiny of the historian more than the work that has been done in regard to housing. We believe that such progress has now been made in building houses that clearing up the slums and reconditioning them.

There is another record which I think will bear intense scrutiny. That is our education record. We have more than fulfilled every pledge we have made but we are only halfway through the work of reform to which our Minister of Education and the Government have set their hands.

I come to another subject in which I take very deep interest and that is maternity and child welfare, and one of our first acts when we come in will be to form a strong committee of inquiry into this whole subject to advise on the best way of treating it and after that I hope we will be in the position to go forward.

Responsibility of Empire

Now I leave the social side of our program. Ours is a policy of sobriety which we can see through; a policy of nursing our trade into better conditions, of looking after the educaand every cottage in the country from end to end, a policy which will be carried out to the utmost of our ability.

The whole Empire is under our direct responsibility, and nove at a is quite satisfied with the progress made. Our preoccupations at home have been very enormous these years and very happy. Overseas, particularly in Africa, we have territories of vast potentiality and we want to help them devlop.

We have done something through Palestine and East African loans, and it is our policy to see that fur-consideration to any supplementary methods of limitation which may be calculated to make our proposals, the French thesis or any other, acceptable to other powers.

No Justification for Arms

"Recently," he said, "it has been my privilege to discuss the general problem of disarmament at considerable length with President Hoover, who has always been an ardent advocate of peace and good under-standing.

"I am in a position to realize how earnestly he feels that the pact for renunciation of war opens to us an unprecedented opportunity for advancing the cause of disarmament an opportunity which admits of no ostponement.

"If we are honest, if the solemn promise of our pact means anything, there is no justification for continuation of a war-taxed peace. Great armaments are but the relic of another age, but they will remain a necessary relic until the present deadlock is broken and that can be accomplished only by a decision of the powers possessing the greatest armaments to initiate measures of eduction."

He recalled that at the tripartite onference at Geneva he had announced American readiness to agree o a plan of limitation at still lower levels, which would maintain the relative status of existing treaties with respect to powers represented

"This still is the attitude of my Government," he declared. "We are willing to agree to any reduction, however drastic, of naval tonnage which leaves no type of war vessel unrestricted."

"My Government," he declared, feels that genuine disarmament will follow only from a change of attitude toward a use of force in the settlement of international disputes. Therefore. I venture to urge countries to the hope they will find in general world conditions and in the solemn obligation they have taken among themselves a "eassurance as to their security, and that they will find in this the confidence to enable them to dispense with armaments which have hitherto seemed so essential."

- Lhe glorious warmth of Spring and early Summer reaches out to you and says, "Go on out and do things ... play tennis, golf, take walks." Have you feet that are unwilling to move . . . that want to stay home for lack of appropriate shoes?

How unnecessary! Smart women everywhere have learned, to their joy, that complete comfort in attractive, chic shoes is truly possible. They come to Coward by hundreds, by thousands, because they know that here they can get shoes that are comfortable and smart, and that are so lovely, so frivolously feminine that no one would suspect them of their "sensible" feel.

Four Changes in

Code Altered in Regard to Jump-Ball at New York

A statement was inserted into the code to enable officials to rule with more uniformity on traveling with the ball. The fourth change had to do with a player fouled in the act of shooting a goal. Henceforth, the ball will be tossed up at center after the second free throw if the player fouled made his field goal. It will be in play after a miss on the second free throw, if the field goal was not made.

The membership of the committee, heretofore consisting of 18 delegates divided equally among the A. A. U., the National Collegiate A. A. and Y. M. C. performance among the relief pitchers was that of Adolph Liska, who won 20 and lost four games for Minneapolie last year.

Vas that the variety of the opening week, the Browns can be counted in on the pennant figuring in capital letters. The Browns won their first games on fine pitching by Gray, Crowder and Ogden. They lost their fourth game by the close score of 5 to 4, and Gray's second victory of the season came in the fifth game. The one heavy setback came Sunday when Detroit obtained 21 hits off four pitchers. Crowder falling to get away well in his second start. Toronto, Ont., Canada. 26 This gives the Browns a record of four victories in six games. The great hitting of Detroit in that last game helped the Browns' opponents to lead them in hits for the six games with 60 to their 55 but St. Louis has made 34 runs to opposing clubs' 30.

Detroit Hits Hard Although Detroit has won only two out of six games, it is not because of its hitting. In fact the Tigers have made 77 hits and 47 runs to their opponents' 70 hits and 40 runs. What then is the trouble? Pitching, as usual. The hitters have done their heaviest work in two games, piling up a total of 18 hits and 15 runs against Cleveland in one game and against St. Louis making 21 hits and 16 runs in Sun-The odds may be against the Philadelphia Athletics winning the title this year but they at least have accom-unable to do in the last few seasons ing regulars out and pitchers not in condition have usually proved too much of an obstacle for the Athletics to surmount in the early seasons and starts, but this year they top the New York Yankees in the standing New York Yankees in the standing after the first week's performances by one-half a game with Cleveland tying them for the leadership.

Best of all, from a Philadelphia viewpoint, is the victory attained over the Yankees, Sunday, 7 to 4. To be sure, the game was ended in the sixth finning on account of rain but the Yankees had made only five hits against Grove in his first start of the year. On Friday the Yankees made only five hits against the veteran Quinn, but they managed to win a close game, 2 to 1. All this is extremely encouraging to the Athletics. Ten hits their own team mates have garnered only 29. A little stronger hitting by both these clubs would rave won all their games for them, Ag it is, Boston has won only one out of three and With Levgard out, G. M. Griffin of encouraging to the Athletics. Ten hits allowed by their pitchers in two games against the Yankees, an even division of games and a lead of one-half a game over the champions in the standing! What a splendid incentive for the Athletics to keep going!

However, New morning round, rallied brilliantly the afternoon and nearly caugh and when its hitting begins to increase in velocity, as it is certain to do, it will be more difficult to defeat, provided of course the box work continues to maintain its present efficiency.

The comparisons between Philadelphia and New York, although made on the showing of the two clubs in less than one week of play, indicate that the race is to be a close and fast one, with such clubs as the St. Louis Browns, Cleveland Indians and Washington Senators offering enough competition to make things interesting all around.

Younger opponent.

Ryerson obtained his lead on the first nine of the morning round, which he negotiated in 35 strokes. Ryerson, starting at the second hole in the first round, scored two successive birdies on the second and third holes. These birdies with par scores on the third and fourth holes gave the Cooperstown player four winning holes. This advantage he held at the end of the morning round despite some fine golf on the part of Stranahan.

NUMBERS ON FRONT AND BACK NUMBERS ON FRONT AND BACK SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR EVANSTON, III.—Numbers on the front as well as on the back of their jerseys will be displayed by football players at Northwestern University next fall, it is announced here by R. E. Hanley, gridiron coach here. And the numbers will be 20 inches in height. Coach Hanley expects the plan to please both fans and officials, as when a player is running toward the stands his number cannot be seen, and after a play is completed he sometimes gets back into formation before his number can be singled out. The numbers will be tried out for the first time at a spring practice game here next Saturday.

Stanford Defeats California Easily

Wins Dual Track and Field Meet by Record-Breaking Margin

PALO ALTO, Calif. (A)-Winning all but four first places, Stanford University's powerful collection of track and field stars surged to a one-sided victory over the University of California in their annual big meet here Saturday by a score cf 942-3 to 361-3. Four meet records, those in the 16throws and running broad jump went by the board, and a fifth, that in the 100-yard dash, was tied. Stanford, in on the

MAXWELL THROWS 75 STRAIGHT BASKETS

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (P)—With a perfect score of 75 straight baskets, Early Maxwell of the Memphis Tigers basketball team, broke the world's record to win the title in the senior men's division in the asqual world free-throw basketball tournament, scores for which were announced from headquarters here Saturday night.

Miss Ellen Baird, forward on the West Tennessee State Teacher's College team, iso of Memphis tossed 58 out of a pessible 60 and retained her title in the senior girls' division. Miss Baird captured the fife last year in a throw-off with a perfect score of 60. In heaking the feebrd, Maxwell, who had won in 1927, obtained two legs on the cup given in the senior men's division. It must be won three times to be retained permanently.

The best team score was made in the junior girls' division by the High School of Tokio, Japan. Its score was 203 out of a possible 225.

SALO WINS ANOTHER LEG EFFINGHAM, III. (P)—John Salo, Passaic, N. J., policeman, advanced to second place in elapsed time in the proposed second place in elapsed time in the transcontinental derby Sunday by leading the runners in their 52.4-mile Jog from Marshall, Ill., to Effingham. Salo, who has been climbing steadily, covered the distance in 7h. 1lm. 45s. He deposed Edward Gardner, Seattle, from second place, as Gardner came in sixth. Peter Gavuzzi of Southampton, Eng., the leader, finished in a fourth-place tie with Philip Granville of Hamilton, Ont. Giusto Umek of Italy placed second, making the distance in 7h. 15m. 15s. Paul Simpson of Burlington, N. C., was third. Salo's fast time in the Marshall-Effingham lap pushed him 46m. 33s. ahead of Gardner, and 3h. 48m. 10s. behind Gavuzzi.

two-mile relay record at the Texas game.

Because of the number and quality of the half-milers, Teitleman probably will be used more at the mile, which he can do around 4m. 30s. Williams can run the mile in about 4m. 28s., and Letts can do it under 4m. 28s., Joseph Wexman '29, a transfer from University of Minnesota, has run the mile in 4m. 19.8s., and often around 4m. 20s., but he has not been so good thus far. He may get back his old form later.

Three Two-Milers In the two-mile run there is Teitelman again, supported by J. M. Jackson '29 and L. R. Brainard '31. With another year of experience the latter may show some development.

Two candidates are out for the hurdles, and one of them is of championship calibre. Harold E. Hayden '30 won the '70-yard high hurdles indoors in 8.7s., making a new 'Big Ten' record. He won a heat in the 120-yard high hurdles at Texas in the fast time of 14.8s. Robert M. "Temple of the Air"

"EMPLE of the Air" is the ambitious title of a new Coumbia radiocast which made its initial appearance on Saturday evening at 9:30, eastern time. The services in this temple have a strong terpsichorean flavor, since they are mainly composed of first-class dance numbers played in unusual special arrangements by the Imperial Palace Orchestra, with an occasional vocal refrain thrown in for good measure.

Advance notices of the program indicated a revolutionary scheme of presentation and announcing, but nothing peculiarly novel seemed to be heard. It is true that the adver-tising was confined to a minimum, mostly coming from the local stations of the chain. The central an-nouncer merely opened the occasion with the oracular pronouncement "Temple Tone!" which was followed by a rippling of silver-toned bells interwoven with a phrase from Amy Woodford-Finden's famous "Temple Bells." Once or twice mention was made of the new receivers to be marketed by this company, whose fame is based upon their good loud-speakers, but that was all. The name of each dance number was plainly and briefly stated.

The new program comes immediately before the hour of dance music provided by B. A. Rolfe's orchestra. It will be at least as satisfactory as the latter to dancers and quite a little more attractive to nondancing

The second half of the Walter Dam-In it a little competition in the way of dance rhythms was offered in Waldteufel's famous waltz, "Les Patineurs," in which the skimming, suggested. Preceding this light and airy number came the somber picsweeping movement of skaters is well of Finland's struggle for independence in Sibelius' "Finlandia." which has been radiocast quite frequently lately, though seldom as well as in this instance.

While this concert was made up of thoroughly well-known compositions, be offered next Saturday evening is to include in addition to nother Viennese waltz, by Strauss vaugnan Williams' "London Symphony," although performed in 1914, was withdrawn for revision until after the war. HE so-called "radario," or radio version of a talking picture, given by the original cast, was introduced by Wendell Hall in the Majestic Hour at 9 p. m., on Sunday evening. Roland West, director of the 'Talkie," brought his experience with screen story-telling to bear upon the very different problems of conveying mpressions by sound only. In this he was very capably assisted by Dana Noyes, who has been providing "sound scenery" for the "Mary and Bob" playlets for some time. As was to be expected, this combination produced an effective entertainment, although there is no doubt that the Hank Simmons' Show Boat organization still leads in radio play produc-

The play chosen was the United Artists feature, "Alibi," which is an adaptation of the stage play, "Night-stick." It is perhaps unfortunate, in view of the increasing feeling that American motion pictures are giving a very false impression to the outorld of conditions in this country that the first "radario" to be diocast over an international network, including a Toronto station, should have stressed these same exaggerated pictures of police corruption and gang conflicts. This new example of the presentation to the Canadian public of influences which they are striving to avoid was hardly compensated for by the fine singing by Redferne Hollinshead at the beginning of the program of "O Canada," though this gesture in itself was doubtless appreciated.

Another unsatisfactory feature of listeners to give their attention to the program by promising the presentation of the story "Alibi" the sponsors simply carried this story to its most uncomfortable point and then sug-gested that its solution could be learned by viewing the picture if local exhibitors should happen to Mr. Russell was born in Lohrville, decide to exhibit it after this sample.

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BURBAU

NE hundred years ago this month—on April 15, 1829—Sir Robert Peel introduced his Metropolitan Police Bill into the British House of Commonst and parliamentary work British House of Commons; and from the little seed then sown has grown the immense police system which prevails in every Englishity of other countries in the world. Peel was a man of humanitarian instincts, and filled with a sense of law and order. He had been deeply impressed with the need of a better police organization to combat the increase of crime in the Metropolis where the teeming population and abundant wealth were intrusted to the care of a body of aged men-"Charleys" they were called—who were often chosen because they were on the parish rates, and were paid no more than two pence an hour, and were not able to deal with the rough cases that came up.

In the Charge of the Parishes In those days each London parish worked independently, and at best worked badly. Kensington, with an area of 15 square miles, and one of the wealthiest districts in London, relied on three constables and three headboroughs. Fulham, with 15,000 nor had Deptford, with a population of 20,000, which was constantly added to by lawless persons driven out of Westminster by a stricter sys tem of supervision. In Spitalfields gangs of thieves stood at the street

He knew it was hopeless to start on a national or even a metropolitan scale, so he proposed, in the first instance, to begin with the parish of Westminster, to proceed to Kensington and Hammersmith, and then go on to every parish with and then go on to every parish with in 15 miles of Charing Cross, which is practically the Metropolitan Police District of the present day, and now consists of 447,626 statute acres with a population of nearly 8,000,000. After that he proposed to police the whole country.

The people were smarting under criminal outrages, yet a storm of opposition burst upon Peel, which required all his courage and skill and sagacity to subdue. The police, it was contended, was an insidious attempt to dragoon and tyrannize over the people. To this day the man in the course of training, before he is allowed to join the Metropolitan Police, is directed in the course of many lectures, to observe the following points: Truthfulness, civility, command of temper, liberty of the subject, inquiries and complaints by the public, tact, discretion, forbearance, avoidance of slang terms and expressions, cultivation of the power of observation.

Wide Knowledge Today

Beyond the ideals of conduct laid down by Peel, the policeman was not then required to know much. But the metropolitan constable of today has a widely extended field of duties. He must have a competent knowledge of the law in its general funda-mentals, and understand, for instance, the question of the removal of furniture at unreasonable hours, water troughs and drinking fountains how to deal with cab touts (a diminisming number since taxicabs came in), a dispute between a driver and his fare, the conduct of coffee stalls, destitute persons, and the privileges of an ambassador.

Peel began with the parish of Westminster, where he installed a total of 168 police, of whom the su-perintendent was paid £200 a year. Today the City of London police, which controls the "sacred square which controls the "sacred square mile," has a force 1161 strong; while the Metropolitan Police has a total of over 20,000, with a considerable number of women; who are engaged on duties where womanly tact and knowledge are most emential. The strength of the police force in England and Wales is 57,089 and in Scotland 6586.

The contenary of the establishment

The centenary of the establishment of the force is not to pass unnoticed. On May 25 a body of 10,000 London police, including the special constables who served so splendidly in the war, and also women constables, will parade in Hyde Park, and be in-spected by the Prince of Wales, and, if the King is in residence, there will be a march past Buckingham Palace.

"I suppose you had," said Mrs. Mouse. Mouse. "The toasted cheese will be quite cold. Tra-la-la. Tra-la-la." It was just like that all over Animal Town.

This was Friday-and tomorrow Saturday, was the opening night of the Animal Town Club. Nothing else was talked about even among the children. When Bennie Squirrel, who had been playing with Willie Rabbit and Johnny Raccoon, tagged them both and cried "Tag, you're it," and ran up a tree, Willie Rabbit said, "You wait. We'll tag you all right tomorrow night at the new club." And Johnny Raccoon said, "There won't be any trees there for you to run up, either, Bennie Squirrel."

Mr. Raccoon and Miss Samantha Bear When Johnny's uncle, Mr. Raccoon met Miss Samantha Bear, to whom he had taken a great fancy ever since the night Miss Bear had hired his sled to go coasting, with Mr. Raccoon to sit in front and steer, Mr. Raccoon lifted his hat, and made a deep bow, and said, "I hope, Miss Bear, that I may hope for the honor of a dance with you at the opening night of the Animal Town Club." And Miss Bear who was rather an old-fashioned girl, blushed becomingly, and bowed prettily, and said she was sure it would be a very great pleasure.

It had been a growing excitement, but in the beginning, as so often hapbut in the beginning, as so often happens, nobody had been very much excited. Mr. Mouse, although he had afterward forgotten all about it, had suggested the idea to Mayor Bear, and then afterward Mayor Bear had forgotten that anybody had suggested it and thought he had had the idea all by himself. They had been talking about this and that, as people do, and Mr. Mouse had said, "John, this town ought to have a Club," and Mr. Bear had said, "So it ought, William." Then they had gone on to something else. When Mayor Bear happened to think of it again some months afterward, it seemed to him a very good idea indeed. So he talked about it to some of the business animals, and they thought it was a good idea, and began raising a subscription. Editor squirrel thought it was a good idea and began writing pieces about it in

Odds and Ends Toys

HE majority of boys and girls have lots of toys, but there is a certain fascination in the toy made out of odds and ends at home, especially if it is made by one-

There is, for instance, the toy raft, made of old corks, which floats splendidly in the bath or in a small pond. First collect a number of corks of one size, if possible, and thread a piece of wire through chough of them to make the width of the raft: then thread another row, and another, and so on until you have the desired length. When the rows of threaded corks are lying neatly in place, side by side, join them by twisting a strong thread round the wires be-tween the corks, commencing at the back and working to the front until they are all fixed firmly together.

Empty cotton reels can be turned into toy trees for your farm. Paint the reels green or crimson with a band of black to make them look like tubs. Fringe any bright green paper by cutting it into strips, leaving a little margin uncut along one edge. Twist the paper round the top of a thin piece of stick, tie firmly with cotton, and pull out the fringe to look like leaves. Fit the other end of the stick into the hole in the cot-

The top of the reel should be painted brown to look like earth. You may have to wind a little piece of brown paper round the base of the stick to make it fit. An avenue of these trees will look very grand leading up to your toy farm.

It is interesting, too, to make paper costumes for your dolls, so that they can play at going to a doil carnival. Pierrots and clowns are quite easy to dress in paper, especially if you use the soft crinkly kind which is so pretty.

But Malory, who whose names were celebrated throughout all Christendom during the later Middle Ages. Half faëry must have toiled long, first to collect, then collate, and translate his French originals, did his work well and his noble book is still "quick and green" and a precious heritage to each succeeding generation. Indeed, the spirit of ancient chivalry celebrated in the romantic tales connected with Arthur and his knights of the Round Table seems to have of the Round Table seems to have pions to come and free them and passed into the very fiber of our their castles from tyrants or usurppassed into the very incer of our time western civilization; so that even this last Christmas, in looking over the The sce last Christmas, in looking over the lists of new books you might have noticed how one modern poet, John Massfield, had returned to the old impenetrable, over the greater part of Masefield, had returned to the old sources for his inspiration. Something like a colorful film and presenting humanity as it never was, save in some early medieval poet's dream, the Morte D'Arthur needs to be read midst hail and rain and thunder and Morte D'Arthur needs to be read in his preface, if we "do after the good and leave the evil," it is a precious book wherein is to be seen

n prose; the alliterative English Morte D'Arthur or "Sir Gavaine and the Green Knight," for example, or the Red Book of Oxford, the "High History of the Holy Grail" too and, in French, Chrétien de Troye's harming poetic Yvain and Erec. But Malory's book, by bringing together the stories of all the knights and interlacing their lives and adventures with the Grail legend and the strange doings of ogre-like giants and Celtic enchanters such as Merlin and Morgan and Nimue, is in itself a Arthur, he will be known ere he de-Arthur, he will be known ere he de-tic dreams and so has yielded inspi-ration and delight down the long

A most remarkable passage con-cerning the household of such a char-acter occurs in the chapter headed, "How Sir Launcelot and Sir Lavaine departed from the fields." Launcelot, at the jousting, had been dis-guised and, though a conqueror, was departing quite unknown since he had left his own famous shield with the Maid of Astolat, and, to please her, had worn her sleeve upon his arm. "Mercy, said Sir Garvaine to Arthur, I marvel what knight that is heralds unto the knight with the years.

But, after the reward, Sir Launcelot still kept his secret and histories of many early queens and departed in search of succor with Sir Lavaine who had been serving him as squire. Then Sir Lavaine behensible. Which fact accounts for much that is confused and shadowy in the setting of his beautiful old tales and especially for such difficult symbolism as is found in the confused account of the strange castle of the Grail, the home of King Peschour and scene of both Perceval's and Galahad's adventures.

RECESSION LIKELY

Pointing out that the decline in commodity prices, combined with high money rates, indicates some business recession, the Harvard Economic So-ciety in its current weekly letter says: "While manufacture and retail trade have been more than seasonally active this spring, recent developments—no-tably the weakness of certain commodity prices, as well as the money tension—suggest some recession from the present level of business. High money rates in this country have also created conditions unfavorable to export trade, which has been acting as a special stimulus to our manufacturing industries. Thus far there has been little tries. Thus far there has been little, if any, let-up in pressure for prompt deliveries, but basic ladustry is now operating at a pace which has seldom been maintained for any extended

"Some contraction seems probable, therefore; and should curtailment prove serious, a renewed unsettlement of stock prices, perhaps a protracted liquidation, might well result, especially under present conditions of money tension. But business is not in the strained condition which has led to real depression in the past; and, while interest rates are now higher. while interest rates are now higher than at any other time since 1921, the present large resources of the reserve system give assurance that no shortage of credit for industrial purposes will develop. On the other hand, interests the contract of the cont est rates, except possibly for a brief easing such as is normal in April and May, will probably continue at high levels, unless collateral loans are liquidated in substantial volume.

Limelight With High Vields Charles of the bond market, and less to stocks. Foreign issues, generally speaking, offer relatively high yields. South American bonds seem particularly at tractive to investors at this time. There are varying degrees of security among South American obligations. The high security among South American obligations, with those of Argentina and Uruguay ranking among the better grade of foreign securities have acted well in the last year's blue below their call port market support, and are felt by many attractive to refer also considered well-secured obligations.

Brazillan securities have acted well in the last year's bond market depression, reflecting the stronger financial condition in that country.

On the other hand, Peruvian bonds have had poor market support, and are felt by many attractive to refer assues, although admittedly not as subject, and the support and the propersion of the light of the subject of the last year's blue with the subject of the subject of the last was although admittedly not as high-grade security.

Apparently, the high yield on Combising 6s is due to the recent labor troubles there and to the unsettled is obtainable on Bolivia bonds, probably a consequence of last year's belief with the subject of Otis Steel 6s '12 101 '42 Pac Gas & Elec 5s '22 101 '45 Pac Gas & Elec 5s '22 101 '45 Pac Gas & Elec 5s '30 109 '45 Pan-Am Pet & T 6s '34 109 '45 Pan-Am Pet & T 6s '34 107 '45 Pan-Am Pet & T 6s '34 107 '45 Pan-Am Pet & T 6s '34 105 '45 Pan-Am Pet & T 6s '41 105 '45 Penn Dixie C-C 6s '41 102 '45 Penn R R 4 '45 '65 108 '45 Penn R R gen 4 '45 '65 108 '45 Penn R R gen 4 '45 '65 108 '45 Penn R R gen 5s '68 108 '45 Penn R R gen 6s '49 100 '45 Penn R R gen 6s '49 100 '45 Penn R R gen 6s '48 100 '45 Penn R gen 6s '48 100 ' Chi Gt West 4s '59

BERLIN—Considering that the year
1927 was a record year, and 1928 showed a decline in business, last year's business reports on the average are satisfactory, is the conclusion the Berliner Tageblatt, a leading German business organ, reaches after having investigated business reports of almost 500 companies in 23 different branches of economic pursuit, and the reports of 119 banks.

Net profit decreased on an average from 10.2 per cent of capital in 1927 to 9.9 per cent last year. Total profit fell from 19.2 per cent to 19 per cent.
Percentage of dividends remained the same, averaging 7.8 per cent, because reductions in some instances were counterbalanced by increases in others.

The number of companies showing BY WIRELESS TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

The number of companies showing losses was reduced, while the amount of losses was reduced, while the amount of losses increased slightly. Nearly all the textile industry suffered last year, according to the Berliner Tageblatt, while its table shows that a most excellent business was done by the aucellent business was done by the automobile industry.

The average drawn from reports of companies in 13 categories show increases both in net and gross profit, while in 10 categories the average shows a decline. Among leading branches of the former category are mining, iron, steel, machine, chemical, automobile, rubber, leather, and paper industries. The other category, showing losses, includes electrotechnical, furniture, textile, shipping, and other branches. branches.

YOUTH BRIDGES CHASMS CLEFT BY WORLD WAR

Students Banish Aloofness by Reconciliation and Mutual Helpfulness

Youth-that perennial fact and recurrent challenge-is constantly demanding more sympathetic un-derstanding and thoughtful consideration.. To aid in fostering a clearer perception of the question, THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR is printing 26 articles on "The Youth of Today." written by one well qualified for the task. This is the nineteenth article of the series.

By WALTER W. VAN KIRK During the period immediately following the World War the students of Europe were faced with the task of weaving together again the disconcareers. Tremendous difficulties stood world. in the way. University faculties had been disorganized. Campus buildings It Looks Easy had been requisitioned for war purposes. Students had been pressed into military service.

"We thank you for the warm approval which has greeted the German proposal. That proposal, from what-ever country it had come, must have gone to the heart of France-how much more, when it came from Germany. There are still people in France who believe that France and Germany have nothing in common but we, when we go back, shall make it known that there are Germans who are doing their utmost to promote the ideal of international understanding. We thank them for it." In this message, the friendliness, bred of these student contacts, is aptly illustrated.

Co-operative Efforts Listed A self-help school was held in Dresden a year ago. It was decided at that time to set up an Inter-national Institute for Student Self-Help, for the collection and classification of data materials bearing on the economic status of students gen-erally and of the co-operative meas-

ANDERSON, STANFORD

Who: GEORGE BORROW.

Where: England and the Continent.

When: Nineteenth century.

Why famous: An English traveler linguist and author, who made a spe-cial study of gypsies and their habits everywhere. Borrow's father having been a recruiting officer, the family journeyed into various parts of Eng-land, Scotland and Wales. The boy George was born in Norfolk, went to school in Edinburgh and entered the employ of a solicitor at Norwich. His natural facility for languages was detected and fostered by William Taylor, a friend of the poet Southey, and it is said that later Borrow acquired the mastery of 20 languages. Leaving Norwich, he went to London and took up literary hackwork, lodging for a time under the roof with Benjamin Disraeli.

No cities or walls could long contain him, however. Unhappy and unsuccessful there, he was soon off and out into the open spaces. Securing an appointment as agent for the British and Foreign Bible Society, he moved slowly through France, Germany, Russia, Spain. And, however incongruous in view of the nature of his mission, he everywhere cultivated the society of the gypsies. His sympathetic understanding of persisted, for when in retire-later on his little estate in Suffolk, Borrow encouraged the gyp-sies to pitch their camps upon his premises.

Borrow's best known work is probably "The Bible in Spain," which presents many and various aspects of the strange scenes and figures met during his five years in Spain. His popular "Lavengro" has been called "a sort of idealized autobiography," for the early experiences of its hero certainly resemble Borrow's own. "Lavengro" is filled with the breeziness, romance and adven-ture of the open road, intermingled with much philosophic lore. Its author was a man of strong and upright character, having a great love for an open-air existence and ab-horring all artificiality and pretense.

A Word a Day

Virtue

Considering the present wide application of this word, it is interesting to note that it originally meant manly strength, from the Latin vir, "man, and as translated from the Greek άρετη (arete), it meant "force," and αμις (dynamis) indicated power or influence.

The fact that purity is so closely associated with virtue emphasizes this latter idea, for certainly the re-tention of that moral power makes for unassailable strength.

Virtue is, however, a sign of ex-cellence in every field, as well as of strength. Take, for example, the æsthetic Italian for whom virtu acquires the significance of the love of the fine arts; or the followers of Socrates, who identified virtue with

It is with "goodness" that virtue is generally connected in our thoughts. But virtue is goodness that has been tried and found not wanting; it is strong through conflict; it is higher than "duty," for nothing has been exacted of it: its worth has made a plaything of obstacles and made neessity meritorious.

Vir'-tue sounds like ver-tu with the first syllable accented, and the first vowel sounding as u in urn, the secand as u in nature.
"And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge."

Note: Webster's first choice is accepted as authority for pronunciation.—Ed

Applying the Law Wisely

As AN evidence of strength rather than of weakness, and of discrimination rather than of a willingness to overlook the real purpose and intent of the law itself, it is announced as the conclusion of the Administration in Washington that penalties provided by the Jones-Stalker Law shall be imposed only in cases where the offenses committed involve commercialism. This, in effect, is the recommendation made by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney-General in charge of prohibition enforcement, in an order issued to federal attorneys throughout the United States.

Attention is directed by Mrs. Willebrandt to the fact that the act referred to is designed to deal effectively with conditions for which those who engage in determined or powerful opposi-tion to the law are responsible. It is the purpose of the department for which she speaks to awaken in public consciousness a realization that the weapon which has been placed in the hands of enforcement officers will not be used unwisely or indiscriminately to punish unduly those whose offenses may properly be catalogued under the head of misdemeanors.

Discretion may well be employed, even if it is sought to temper justice with mercy, at a time when popular prejudice is inclined to condone disobedience. By what many believe to be a misconception of a public right, much is urged in behalf of so-called personal liberty. The ignorant and the avaricious have been misled to believe that they are committing no serious offense when they disobey or infringe the plain letter of the law. Those who ignorantly offend will be sufficiently punished if they are made to answer when charged with a misdemeanor.

But it is to meet and deal with a more serious condition that the Jones-Stalker Law was enacted. It is aimed to reach those who are making it possible for the minor offenders to keep up their pernicious campaign of sharpshooting all along the line. Once the source of the illicit supply is undermined, and those who provide and seek to protect it are apprehended and convicted, the lesser traffic carried on by bootleggers and speakeasies will be destroyed or measurably curtailed.

What the law-abiding people of the United States desire now is that the confidence which Mrs. Willebrandt bespeaks for the law as a whole be established in the public consciousness. No doubt it will be agreed that the small offender should be exempted from the higher penalties. But it should be made apparent without unnecessary delay that those who offend grievously are to be required to answer.

The New York State Barge Canal

THE measure of value of any agency of transport assuredly lies in the degree of popular favor which it enjoys, and if one may judge by the increasing tonnage moved by the New York State Barge Canal it possesses sufficient merit to deserve recognition among the transportation agencies of eastern United States.

The barge canal is, essentially, an outgrowth of the Erie Canal which, when completed in 1825, was expected to provide for all time an economical and expeditious route between New York and the Great Lakes. Came the railroads a few years later and the canal eventually fell into a state of desuetude from which it has only recently been rescued by the improvements made in the canal system, including the deepening of the channel, the building of improved locks and facilities, terminals and other appurtenances.

Canalization of navigable streams is quite a different picture from that of earlier years. No longer does the indolent captain depend upon mule or horse power to propel his craft. No longer are the towpaths scenes of picturesque, if inefficient, methods of propulsion. Present methods consist of modern tugs or self-contained power units, capable of cheaper and speedier progress. Loads are greater and, with no right-of-way to maintain, the canal operator is able to offer cheaper rates than can the railroads with which he competes, for the railway not only has to keep its track in condition but to pay its taxes of which, it cannot be denied, a share indirectly goes toward the upkeep of the competing waterway.

While there is, perhaps, an element of inequity in this situation, yet progress can be served only by promoting cheaper and cheaper units of transport. This is unfortunate, from a rail viewpoint; but with the highest esteem for its railways the State of New York is only keeping abreast of the modern trend in reverting to the use of waterways for the movement of the bulk freight which pays low rates and in which rapid transport is not an element.

Fixing Responsibility

NE of the most difficult problems facing the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States is the enforcement of its rulings against the encroachments of professionalism. So far as sports followers are concerned, the actual status of an athlete, whether professional or amateur, is of small consequence compared to his performances in competition; but the followers do claim the right to know that the Here is a responsibility for someone to carry, and it appears in certain instances as though athletes had tried, unjustifiably, to place it all on the shoulders of the A. A. U.

The claim that the constitution of the A. A. U. is out of date and therefore not suited to modern conditions does not detract from the fact that the organization has done its best to prevent violations of its rules as applied to "amateurs being paid." With a more flexible code of laws, better results may be obtained, and Avery Brundage, president of the union, is open to wise recommendations. "There has been considerable complaint about the Amateur Athletic Union and its policies lately," he said. "We want to show we are open to constructive criticism and are willing to correct any defects, if there are any." The question remains, however, "Does all the obligation rest entirely upon the A. A. U.?" Is there not an opportunity here for athletes, who claim to know of specific instances where amateurs have been paid under cover, to point out the violators so that the A. A. U. may act? Many a problem of far greater import than this has gone to its Waterloo when stress has been placed on greater co-operative effort.

Getting Rid of the Slums

THE nineteenth century, which recognized comparatively quickly the need for regulating the conditions in which the English laboring classes worked, never woke up at all to the corresponding necessity of regulating the conditions in which they lived. In consequence the growth of slum areas in nearly all the large industrial centers went on unchecked until a very recent date. The building of back-to-back houses, of which there are 72,000 in Leeds alone, was not prohibited until 1909; and today it is estimated that more than 6 per cent of the population are living in insanitary dwell-

The five years' complete cessation of building which resulted from the war attracted public attention to the housing question, and from the housing question it passed to the slums. The Housing Acts of 1919, 1923, and 1924 dealt mainly with the provision of new houses, and had little to do with the slum question proper; but now that the deficiency of new houses has been almost made up, each political party is placing the slum problem in the forefront of its discussions.

The houses that have been built in such large numbers during the last ten years unhappily do not touch the slum problem at any point, because they are let at rents which the very poor cannot afford to pay. For this reason the Act of 1925 approaches the difficulty from another side; it gives permission to local authorities to clear slum areas by acquiring them at site values only, without making any allowance for the buildings on the land. Local authorities can thus abolish slum property at a minimum of expense, but the act is permissive only, and many authorities are reluctant to use the powers it gives them, because they feel that dispossession without compensation for the buildings is a serious injustice to those landlords in slum areas who have kept their property in good repair. Other local authorities -notably the London County Council-consider that this class of property owner is too small to warrant the holding up of the great work which the Act of 1925 makes possible; and they are showing by the zest with which they are entering into the task of enforcing the act that they agree with Sir William Hart, town clerk of Sheffield, that the law as it stands is capable on the whole of dealing with the slum problem, if only it is put into operation.

Meanwhile, the activities of the many progressive town councils engaged in clearing away slum property is admirably supplemented by private enterprise of the type inaugurated by Octavia Hill. The essence of the Octavia Hill system, which has been so effective in various parts of London, is the substitution for a bad landlord of one, who, in return for the prompt payment of rent, is willing to keep the property in good condition. The Association of Women's House Property Managers, acting upon this system, has succeeded in buying up and reclaiming much slum property, and has found that it can do this, not only to the benefit of the dwellers in the area, but at a profit to itself. The continuance of this method, together with increased public activity, should go a long way toward providing a solution of the slum problem in the comparatively near future.

Stonehenge Is Saved

NOT long ago it became known that if the land to the north of Stonehenge, the most famous and venerable of British monuments, would be sold for exploitation by the builders of those pink bungalows, ramshackle cafés and petrol pumps which now disfigure so many parts of the English countryside. No effort was spared to avoid this catastrophe; the National Trust appealed to the country through the newspapers, and J. C. Squire wrote an impressive article in the London Observer in support of the request for contributions.

From the first, people gave generously; with a fortnight to go, there remained only £5000 to be raised; a week later another £3000 had come in; then the race against time became really exciting. Would the Stonehenge fund be able to obtain £2000 in seven days was as thrilling a question as who would win the boat race. And in the one event the fund achieved as convincing a victory as did Cambridge in the other; for, with four days still to go, it was announced that the £8500 had been oversubscribed. All classes of the community contributed to this saving of Stonehenge; the gifts varied from sums of £500 to the shilling which was sent by a boy of eight because his "Granny told him he would be glad he had" done so when he was a man. Sir Thomas Browne thought that "what song the sirens sang . . . was not beyond all conjecture"; but generations of antiquaries more learned than he have been puzzled to find the meaning and purpose of this huge circle of stones that rises so starkly and desolately out of the gloom of Salisbury Plain. For more than 1000 years the flow of guesses and tentative explanations has gone on, the earliest suggesevents they watch are, so far as it is possible to tion, made by Nennius in the ninth century, make them, free from irregularities of all sorts. being that Stonehenge was transported from Ireland by the incantations of the magician Merlin to commemorate the 400 British nobles whom Hengist had treacherously slain. Others have thought it the work of Romans or Danes, whilst many have considered it either a Saxon burial ground or a Druid temple. The latter theory was easily the most plausible explanation available until the suggestion was made that the monument was originally erected for the worship of the sun.

On midsummer morning the sun rises almost at right angles to the great stone known as the Friar's Heel. If the theory of sun-worship is correct, it is probable that on the first midsummer morning after this stone was set in place the sun rose immediately over it. The amount of deviation which the newly risen midsummer sun now shows indicates to the astronomer the answer to the much debated question of the antiquity of Stonehenge, and Sir Norman Lockyer, pursuing this line of inquiry some years ago, found that the sun rose exactly at right angles to the Friar's Heel on June 21, 1600 B. C. Certainly the observer today, looking upon its gaunt and ancient impressiveness, has no difficulty in believing that Stonehenge has witnessed all the changes that have taken place in the last thirty-five centuries.

Have You Read ——?

TENDENCY is observable in the daily A press, catering perhaps to readers who are not yet members of a book club, to poke good-natured fun at book clubs generally. They increase numerically, and seem, indeed, an odd growth of the acorn planted by the small gathering of intimates that was first called a club—or, as then written, a "clubbe"—some 300 years ago.

Over the intervening years the world has become busier and busier; the time comes when, according to the book club advertisement, "the average intelligent book-reader" has no longer leisure to pick out his book. There are so many demands upon his average intelligence, one might say, that his book-reading suffers. He may perchance hear of a book. He says to himself, "I must read that." But nobody brings it to him. Years afterward he may still be saying to himself "I should have read that." If, on the other hand, he had belonged to a book club the postman might have brought him that very book before he had heard of it. At any rate the postman would have brought him a book worthy of his average intelligence; nay more, he could have sampled that book, dipped into it, appraised it, returned it, if such his decision, to the useful postman, who would presently have brought him another.

Somebody outside the clubs has recently raised the question: Does the member have to read the book? The inquirer mentions what seems to be a hypothetical club. "How many successive volumes," he asks, "may a member, let us say, of the Garden and Poultry Book Club, put away on the shelf unfinished and yet retain membership in good standing?" Answering this question, the officials of the Garden and Poultry Book Club would no doubt refer the inquirer to its descriptive literature, and ask him to use his common sense. Failure to read a book is subject to fine. If the member who receives as his current book "Jessie: the Biography of a Hen," neither reads that book nor exchanges it for some other outstanding garden or poultry book, he has in practical effect fined himself the proportion of the club dues represented by "Jessie: the Biography of a Hen." Nor, by inference, is there any need of a specifically stated law against lending a member's book to non-members. Loyalty to the club, the simple, everyday noblesse oblige of membership, will scorn this practice, which among non-members permits so many books to be read with no financial benefit to worthy authors and publishers.

Sooner or later, no doubt, somebody will want to know how many clubs one must join in order to become a "prominent bookclubman."

The total registration of motor vehicles in the United States in 1928 was 24,493,124, according to the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture. This would indicate that when the "saturation point" is reached it will be because there is not room for any more and not because there is not a demand.

The enlarged athletic program which is being introduced into the public schools of Mexico should raise that country to a level which will make it a worthy Olympic Games competitor. But more, judging from the results of increased athletic interest in other countries, it should help to put an end to revolution.

Germany's bill for the World War, no matter what the final settlement may be, falls largely on those who when the war was going on were too young to know what it was all about. Youth would do well to learn its lesson and to arm itself more solidly than ever-against war.

According to O. R. Miller, superintendent of the New York Civic League, "Publishers have found a sold mine in putting vile and degrading literature on the market." Hope may be found in the fact that many a gold mine venture turns out to be a "bursted bubble."

Mrs. Herbert Hoover has set an encouraging example for the women of Washington, for, although she is the wealthiest woman who was ever mistress of the White House, she wore the same gown at a recent reception that she wore at her husband's inauguration.

One further advance step has been taken along the road that leads to peace, in the fact that for the first time in fifteen years German firms have taken part in the British printers' exhibition in London. Thus are the wounds of the war being healed.

Washington, D. C.

By Collinson Owen

any other city in the United States. Everybody knows that, even the people who live in Washington. It has a real guidebook of its own, of a kind you might buy in London, Paris or Rome. Here is plenty of background of history, and the fact that it is only 150 years or less in depth does not seem to mafter so much. There is elegance, and people live lives of ease, much as some people still dare to do in Europe. There are diplomatists and dinner parties, and a monocle in the street would not cause a riot, even though it might excite a certain amount of compassion. The President lives there, and though in the process of becoming President he is merely a politician, subject to bitter attacks from those who would like somebody else to be elected, once he is President he becomes America's First Citizen and his wife the First Lady of the Land.

Washington, also, in many respects, is a really beautiful city. There was a lady, indeed, who said to me that it is the only beautiful city in America; but then, she was a Washingtonian.

In fact, in writing about Washington one is in considerable danger of being dull, because to touch on the subject of the Lincoln Memorial, the Capitol and the various other buildings of national and historic import is rather like describing the Champs Elysées, the Tower of London, or the National Gallery, which would be somewhat absurd at this time of day. So we will leave them alone.

Perhaps Mount Vernon is rather different, even though all the world knows of that, too, or should. A sort of Hampton Court to the capital, although of course not quite so impressive. Washington did not have quite such grandiose ideas as Cardinal Wolsey. It would be worth visiting for its charm as an old colonial mansion, even if Washington had not lived there. When Washington's half brother, Lawrence, built this house and named it in honor of an English admiral under whom he had served, he would have been an amazed man indeed could he have foreseen what its rôle was to be in history. Mount Vernon, I should say, is the most historic building in the United States—with the exception of one other which was not to come into the story until many years later.

On the way to Mount Vernon, just to make it even more interesting, is Alexandria, with a quite definite "Old World charm" still showing in many of its red brick houses, its old-fashioned Christ Church, and Carlyle House, where General Braddock, come to America to assume command of the British forces (when there was no question of American forces), conferred with the governors of six of the British colonies "to devise means for raising revenue for the support of service in North

It gives one a considerable thrill to consult an American guidebook concerning affairs that so nearly touch English history, to read: "To Carlyle House came George Washington, summoned from Mount Vernon by Braddock, who offered him a commission as major in the British Army, and it was in the Carlyle House that, contrary to Washington's advice, Braddock's disastrous expedition to Fort Duquesne was resolved upon."

It is in such places as Alexandria and Mount Vernon that one is inclined to muse on the fascinating, but no doubt profitless, theme as to what would have happened to the English-speaking peoples if there had been no Revolution; and also to think once again how much it was a family quarrel, British and British, and not, as modern America is too much inclined to think, a war between a country that believes in central heating and one that (unfortunately) doesn't. When Washington lived at Mount Vernon such things as San Francisco, the movies, Chicago, the Grand Canyon, peanuts, ice-cream freezers, and vacuum cleaners had never been heard of.

The intelligent visitor will not have been long in Washington before he makes his way to that old-fashioned redbrick house in Tenth Street, where in a little bedroom on the ground floor Lincoln passed on, shortly after being shot in Ford's Theater, immediately across the street.

As the tall President was carried out of the theater, As the tall President was carried out of the theater, just after Booth had shot him; a light was observed burning in number ten, and into this house he was carried, being placed on the bed of a young man, a boarder, who in consequence occupies his own small niche in American history. So much I learned at once. One knew fairly well the story of Lincoln's assassination. But I had never been aware of these details, and it was quite thrilling to learn them on the spot.

It was this room that appealed to me as the most historic spot I had seen in America. It was more alive with a great presence than anywhere else I visited, or anywhere else, I think, that could be visited; much more so, even, Wandsworth. We both had something to be pleased about.

AZASHINGTON, of course, is quite different from | than Mount Vernon, even though the furniture with which Washington was surrounded is all there. And so powerful is its historic appeal that it seems to belong to a past much more remote than is really the case. And because of this, one is all the more surprised to find hanging on the walls actual photographs of Lincoln, in his high hat, visiting the Army of the Potomac. Lincoln belongs to so long ago-or seems to-that one forgets the camera was then invented. There he is, standing with a group of officers, and also seated with General McClellan, in "Little Mac's" tent, with maps and plans spread before

To me these slightly faded photographs came with all the shock of surprise with which I should have found a photograph of Napoleon at Waterloo or Pitt leaving the House of Commons. Gladstone and Disraeli and many other great figures of the past belong to the age of photography. But somehow it is amazing to see Lincoln thus

It seemed to me that the immense interest and value of these photographs was, perhaps, not quite realized by those most familiar with them, but in this maybe I was wrong.

The tall and grave curator who shows visitors round is steeped in his task. He talks in a hushed voice, as though the tragedy had happened not many days before. He heightens the impression that, historically, this is the holiest spot in all the United States.

It was the curator who told me that although Ford's Theater over the way was now a mere shell-some day it will probably also be a museum—there was an official caretaker there who would no doubt let me in if I told him I would like to see over it.

I crossed the street and knocked at the big door. A man in a uniform not quite that of a policeman's appeared and regarded me silently. I spoke my little piece, and he asked me inside. It was near the end of the day and the light was failing. He switched on a few lights and showed me what he was in charge of—a big barn of a place, used for various commercial purposes since Lincoln's day, and with no semblance of a theater left. What a pity that is! If only some millionaire of the period-if there were any then-had bought the theater and kept it as it was, with Lincoln's box just as it was! But there was the doorway through which Booth had rushed out, to where his horse waited at the back. The stable had given place to a filling station,

1 1 1 Afterward the caretaker took me into his own small room, which had a stove in it, and we talked. He wore a bushy mustache, somewhat of the Old Bill type. There was something in the speech of this uniformed caretaker which was curiously familiar. I was puzzled by it. And then he said:

"What's Wandsworth looking like now?" So that was it. He was talking cockney, pure and undefiled, but fainter with the passing of many years away from the Thames. Forty years he had been in America, and never been back to England in all that time, but the original speech of Wandsworth was still there. He was a pensioner with a house and motorcar of his own, and the year before he had driven his wife up to Canada. He had served in the United States Army, and had been all over the country in one capacity and another. He did eight hours a day at this lonely and eventless job of caretaking, because it was better than being at home all the time. And he was now an American, with no regretsor not many.

"I'll tell you one reason why I like America," he explained. "One man's as good as another here. If Henry Ford wanted to talk to me, he'd talk to me just as though I was the same as himself, just the same as though I was one of those congressmen up there. . . . He'd probably be nicer to me than to a congressman, just because I'm nobody in particular. You wouldn't get that in England." It occurred to me that if in America one man is really as good as another, there should be no room for condescension even from Mr. Henry Ford. But I didn't say it, because I didn't want to disturb his theory, which must have been a very comforting one.

And despite his sturdy Americanism, certain wistfulnesses crept out as we went on talking. He would dearly have loved to know what Wandsworth was looking like, which was a question not easy to answer. And he admitted that there were some things better in England, but what they were we will leave behind in the cold and gloomy shell of Ford's Theater. Anyhow we parted with mutual respect. He was going to go on living in Washington, and I should shortly be returning to the city in which, somewhere or other, lies

From the World's Great Capitals-Rome

Rome witnessed a startling and rare phenomenon a short while ago which has greatly puzzled its people. At about noon, on a cold but a very bright day, two suns suddenly appeared on the blue sky, one next to the other, "the mock sun" being of exactly the same size as the actual sun, and the two being linked together by a luminous arch. The sight caused great wonder to the people who at that hour crowded the streets; nobody could explain the phenomenon, and the popular imagination began to give curious versions of the unusual spectacle. The mystery, however, was dispelled that same evening by the astronomer of the observatory at the Capitol who informed the local press than the phenomenon, if exceptional for Italy, was quite common in the arctic and antarctic regions. It was due, he said, to the refraction of the light of the sun (the actual one) against myriads of tiny icicles in the sky during intense cold, which thus produced an optical illusion of a "mock sun." The phenomenon, which is technically called Parhelion, lasted about half an hour. 1 1 1

Signor Mussolini has presented to Switzerland part of the manuscripts of Albrecht von Haller, which were de-posited at the Brera Library in Milan and in the University of Pavia. The Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, into whose hands Haller's manuscripts had fallen after many vicissitudes, had distributed them among various libraries, and in this way the Brera Library of Milan had come into possession of many precious manuscripts of the Swiss savant. The city of Berne was anxious to gain possession of the scattered manuscripts, and the Italian Government had been offered, as an exchange, other documents of particular interest to Italy. Signor Mussolini has finally consented to present a number of Haller's manuscripts to Berne, and his action has been greatly appreciated by the Swiss authorities and people.

Telephonic communication by wireless has now been established between Turin and Buenos Aires, and the first conversation took place recently. The experiment has been successful and the human voice was carried over a distance of 7500 miles with perfect clearness. Descriptions of the weather conditions in their respective countries were sent during the first conversation lasting six minutes, and it is stated that the Turin operator could hardly believe that while his own city was covered with a white mantle of snow Buenos Aires was suffering from a heat wave. The authorities are confident that the wireless telephone service with South America will prove a great help to industry and will intensify commercial intercourse between northern Italy and South American

Within the kingdom of Italy there are now two small and independent states, the City of the Vatican and the Republic of San Marino. The area of both is indeed very limited, but they both enjoy sovereign rights as recognized by international law. While the head of the Vatican state is called the Sovereign Pontiff, and is elected for life, the rulers of the Republic of San Marino are two and are officially known as Regents. They hold office for one year, and their election and proclamation are still accompanied by a medieval pageant, which always attracts a great number of tourists to the place. In spite of its small size, San Marino is very jealous of its independence, and is certainly the only place in Italy where "free elections" are still held. San Marino, however, has now turned Fascist, and many of its citizens wear the Fascist badge, But, in fairness to Fascism, it must be added that it has always respected the centuries-old privileges of the small town.

Excavations have been continued during the winter months at Agrigento (formerly known as Girgenti), in southern Sicily, where, at the request of Capt. A. Hardcastle, the Italian Government has been exploring parts of this ancient Greek city, once in works of art the richest of all. The most recent discoveries are of exceptional importance not only to archæologists, but to students of ancient religion. The merit of the last discovery partly rests with the peasant who, while planting an almond tree, struck a circular opening of stone blocks. On examination by Prof. Pirro Marconi, director of Antiquities in Sicily, this deep conical cavity has been found to be the so-called Bothros of a votive altar. Excavations on this particular spot were intensified, and the result was the unearthing of three circular altars; these altars, although smaller than the two archaic altars discovered in 1927, were, however, more perfect and in a better state of preservation. Inside the Bothros were found large terra-cotta busts of Demeter and Persephone, as well as a large number of votive offerings, statuettes, vases of all sizes-all these relics belonging to the sixth century B. C. In the same site, too, were found remains belonging to the Siculan Age, including two polished stone axes, definitely identified as dating back to 2000 B. C. 1 1 1

Signor Mussolini is evidently determined to stop, or at least to reduce to the minimum, the exodus from the country to the town. The "Back-to-the-Land" movement has now begun to be indorsed by special laws. The pre-fects of Milan and of Rome, with the object of checking the increasing influx of country people to their cities, have ordered that all who come to Rome or to Milan to seek employment should register their names at a special office within five days. If a person is unable to find work or lodgings within a fortnight of his arrival he is immediately sent back to his native village. Those who succeed in finding jobs will be placed under police supervision for six months, and employers have been warned against engaging workers without previously obtaining police permits. Severe penalties, including imprisonment for three months, are inflicted on all who disobey this measure.
